"Fulbright Program's Foreign Language Teaching Assistant Award"

Going Well:

4 to 5 less commonly taught languages would not be available to the UO without the FLTA's.

Project Description:

Through the Fulbright Foreign Language Teaching Assistantship, international student-teachers spend a year developing UO's knowledge of foreign cultures and rare languages, exploring the structure and content of U.S. education, and enriching the community through the Intl Cultural Service Program.

Lesson Learned:

A language represents a community's distinctive features and mirrors our diversity as complex human beings. Supporting this global-scale diversity benefits students and should be a top priority.

Challenge:

Selection as a host institution is extremely competitive and is based on UO's financial commitment.
