

Sara Clark

Some of my favorite problems to solve are communication breakdowns, including understanding the role of culture and power in shaping what we think is normal, right, and good. I have had the great pleasure of building connections and facilitating learning (including my own!) at the UO Mills International Center since 2009. During that time I also earned a MA in Global Studies at the UO and took a year sabbatical to live and work in Nicaragua. Challenges I'm enjoying right now include facilitating hybrid dialogue groups, flamenco dancing, and staying connected with loved ones in 6 time zones.